It is now quite clear that the presence of happiness is granted to men by all these things, or by some or one of them; for almost all the ways in which it occurs fall under these principles, inasmuch as all the acts that spring from thought can be included with those that spring from knowledge. But to be happy and to five happy and finally can consist mainly of three things considered as most desirable: some people say that the SabidurÃa4 is the greatest good, others the Goodness5 and others the Pleasure. And certain people debate its importance in relation ³ happiness, happiness.
